READING

1 Read the passage carefully.

The Food Basket of Saudi Arabia

Last month, a popular travel programme was broadcast on Saudi TV about Jazan, a coastal region in the south-west of the Kingdom. The presenter, who grew up in Sabya, showed viewers why Jazan is often called the "food basket" of Saudi Arabia. Because the land is fertile and the weather is warm and humid for most of the year, farmers there can grow tropical fruits such as mangoes, papayas and bananas.

In one episode, the presenter visited a mango farm that has belonged to the same family for over sixty years. The farmer explained that he sends his fruit to markets all over the country. Frankly, he said, the biggest challenge is the summer heat, which can damage young trees.

The programme was so successful that the channel is going to make an English version for international viewers next year.
